1 Policy Statement

Move More is fully committed to compliance with the requirements of the UK General Data Protection Regulation and Data Protection Act 2018. The charity will therefore aim to ensure that all employees, contractors, agents, consultants, or partners of Move More who have access to any personal data held by or on behalf of the charity, are fully aware of and abide by their duties and responsibilities under the Regulation.

2 Purpose

Move More needs to collect and use certain types of information about people with whom it deals in order to perform its functions. This includes information on current, past and prospective employees, suppliers, clients, customers, service users, school pupils and others with whom it communicates. The charity is required by law to collect and use certain types of information to fulfil its statutory duties and also to comply with the legal requirements of the Government. This personal information must be dealt with properly whether it is collected, recorded and used on paper, computer, or other material. There are safeguards to ensure this in the UK General Data Protection Regulation and Data Protection Act 2018.

Move More regards the lawful and correct treatment of personal information as critical to successful operations, and to maintaining confidence between those with whom we deal and ourselves. It is essential that it treats personal information lawfully and correctly.

The purpose of this policy is to explain how Move More will ensure compliance with the UK General Data Protection Regulation and Data Protection Act 2018. It includes organisational measures and individual responsibilities which aim to ensure that the charity complies with the Data Protection principles and respects the rights of individuals. This policy provides outline measures and puts in place a structure for monitoring compliance.

Detailed procedures and guidance do not form part of this overarching policy document. The detailed guidance can be accessed via the website and links to relevant documents are included within this Policy document. Other related policies are listed under Section 14.

3 Legal Context and Definitions

3.1 UK General Data Protection Regulation and Data protection Act 2018

The UK General Data Protection Regulation (UK GDPR) and Data Protection Act 2018 governs how information about people (Personal Data) should be treated. It also gives rights to individuals whose data is held. The Data Protection Act came into force on 25 May 2018 and applies to all personal data collected at any time whether held on computer or manual record. The Regulation is enforced by the Information Commissioner.

The UK GDPR makes a distinction between personal data and "sensitive" personal data. Sensitive personal data is subject to stricter conditions of processing.

Personal data means any information relating to an identified or identifiable natural person ('data subject'); an identifiable natural person is one who can be identified, directly or indirectly, in particular by reference to an identifier such as a name, an identification number, location data, an online identifier or to one or more factors specific to the physical, physiological, genetic, mental, economic, cultural or social identity of that natural person.

Sensitive personal data is defined as personal data consisting of information as to:

Racial or ethnic origin; political opinions; religious or philosophical beliefs; or trade union membership; genetic data, biometric data for the purpose of uniquely identifying a natural person, data concerning health or data concerning a natural person's sex life or sexual orientation.

A Data Subject is an individual who is the subject of the data.

A Data Controller is an organisation, or person that determines the purposes for which and the manner in which any personal data is to be processed.

A Data processor is any organisation or person who processes data on behalf of the data controller.

Processing means any operation or set of operations which is performed on personal data or on sets of personal data, whether or not by automated means, such as collection, recording, organisation, structuring, storage, adaptation or alteration, retrieval, consultation, use, disclosure by transmission, dissemination or otherwise making available, alignment or combination, restriction, erasure or destruction.

The UK GDPR contains 6 principles for processing personal data with which organisations must comply.

Personal data shall be:

- (1) processed lawfully, fairly and in a transparent manner in relation to the data subject ('lawfulness, fairness and transparency');
- (2) collected for specified, explicit and legitimate purposes and not further processed in a manner that is incompatible with those purposes; further processing for archiving purposes in the public interest, scientific or historical research purposes or statistical purposes shall, in accordance with Article 89(1), not be considered to be incompatible with the initial purposes ('purpose limitation');
- (3) adequate, relevant and limited to what is necessary in relation to the purposes for which they are processed ('data minimisation');
- (4) accurate and, where necessary, kept up to date; every reasonable step must be taken to ensure that personal data that are inaccurate, having regard to the purposes for which they are processed, are erased or rectified without delay ('accuracy');
- (5) kept in a form which permits identification of data subjects for no longer than is necessary for the purposes for which the personal data are processed; personal data may be stored for longer periods insofar as the personal data will be processed solely for archiving purposes in the public interest, scientific or historical research purposes or statistical purposes in accordance with Article 89 (1) subject to implementation of the appropriate technical and organisational measures required by this Regulation in order to safeguard the rights and freedoms of the data subject ('storage limitation');
- (6) processed in a manner that ensures appropriate security of the personal data, including protection against unauthorised or unlawful processing and against accidental loss, destruction or damage, using appropriate technical or organisational measures ('integrity and confidentiality').

Data subject rights are:

The right to be informed that processing is being undertaken.

The right of access to one's personal information.

The right to prevent processing in certain circumstances.

The right to rectify, block or erase information which is regarded as wrong information.

The right to have decisions reviewed where they have been made automatically.

The right to object to receiving marketing information.

In cases where consent is obtained, the consent must be free and informed and may be changed at any time.

The charity will, as far as is practicable, ensure that all individuals whose details are processed are aware of the way in which that information will be held, used and disclosed. Individuals will, where possible, be informed of the likely recipients of the information - whether the recipients are internal or external to the charity.

This information will be provided when personal data is first collected, whether written or verbal.

When personal data is to be used for a new purpose then the fairness information will be provided to the data subject again and if necessary a new consent will be sought.

Access to personal data outside of the charity should not be attempted using unsecured access systems (this includes via mobile networks outside of UK unless the network has been checked in advance to be compliant under data protection law).

System testing will only be carried out using personal data where sufficient safeguards are in place and will not be undertaken on live databases accessing live personal sensitive data.

Personal data will not be transferred outside the United Kingdom without the approval of the data controller.

9 Data Subjects Rights

Move More will ensure that the rights of people about whom the information is held can be fully exercised under the Regulation.

Move More will provide individuals with a copy of the information held about them within one month of receiving a request (subject access). This period may be extended by two further months where necessary, taking into account the complexity and number of the requests.

On receiving a request for subject access the charity will check and require evidence of the identity of the individual and any further information required to isolate the records of that individual.

Where a subject access request has a broad scope, the charity may ask for more details from the data subject in order to locate the information that is of particular interest.

Where a large volume of information is held, the charity may seek to make the information available in ways other than providing a copy. This could include arranging an appointment for the data to be inspected within Move More offices.

In addition to the personal data itself, the individual will be provided with any supporting information that is needed to understand the data held, and the processing of it.

Where information located as part of a subject access request contains personal data about a third party, information will not be released unless the requirements set out in section 10.1 are met.

The right of access to non-personal information held by the charity under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 may also need to be considered. This is because some requests may be for a combination of personal and non-personal information.

Move More has a Subject Access Form for Applicants and a Subject Access Procedure for Staff receiving requests to follow. All Subject Access requests received will be recorded for monitoring and reporting purposes.

The charity will comply immediately with a request from an individual to cease sending them marketing or consultation information.

Requests from individuals to correct, rectify, block, or erase information that they regard as wrong information or to stop processing that is causing damage or distress will be considered by Move More on a case by case basis. The individual concerned will be fully informed of the resulting decision and the reasons for it. Legal advice will be sought by the charity should a request not be supported, or if considered sensitive/complex before coming to a decision.

An individual wishing to exercise any of their rights under the UK GDPR should put their request in writing to Move More.

10 Disclosure and Sharing

10.1 Third party access to information

Where a request for personal data is made by a third party on behalf of the data subject it shall be treated as a subject access request. Evidence is required that the third party is entitled to act in this way, such as a written statement from the data subject or an enduring power of attorney. Appropriate professionals may need to be consulted before a decision to release the personal data is made.

Occasionally third party information may form part of the data extracted in response to a subject access request. In deciding whether to release this information, Move More will consider the following:

- any duty of confidentiality owed to the third party;
- attempts to get consent from the third party;
- any express refusal of consent from the third party;
- the third party's expectations with respect to that data.

When a request for personal data is made by a third party and not on behalf of the data subject, the charity shall consider the request under Freedom of Information as well as UK GDPR. It shall consider whether releasing the personal data would breach any of the Data Protection principles and in particular whether any exemptions under UK GDPR apply. Personal information will not be shared with third parties unless specifically allowed for in law and justified in the specific situation.

The Freedom of Information publication scheme deals with requests for information about third parties, and information will be withheld where disclosing it would breach any of the Data Protection principles. A response to an FOI request must not take into account the reasons behind the request.

When there is a specific reason for requesting the information, an exemption under UK GDPR may apply. Examples are where information is required for the prevention or detection of crime, apprehension or prosecution of offenders or assessment or collection of tax.

If an appropriate exemption under UK GDPR or Data Protection Act 2018 does apply so that the Data Protection principles will not be breached, the charity will usually comply with the request. However, without a Court Order there is no obligation on Move More to disclose the information.

Where the charity is not convinced that the third party has entitlement to the personal data, or that any exemptions under UK GDPR apply, and that releasing information would breach the Data Protection principles, the personal data will be withheld and only released on presentation of a Court Order.

10.2 Information sharing

Move More promotes information sharing where it is in the best interests of the data subject, providing a lawful basis for this is established prior to sharing and that security measures are in place. However, personal sensitive data will not be shared unless it is in connection with the primary purpose for which the information was collected, or the data subject has explicitly given their permission for the information to be shared for this purpose, or another legal provision (UK GDPR exemption exists) to allow the sharing such information.

The charity will ensure that supporting processes and documentation are made available to staff and professionals so that they understand how to share information safely and lawfully, ensuring the data is encrypted in transit, stored securely and not kept for longer than is necessary.

Where an employee acting in good faith has shared information in accordance with these supporting processes and documentation, they shall not normally be subject to disciplinary action under section 5.2, hereof.

Sharing large sets of information, or recurrent regular sharing shall be carried out under written agreement to ensure the continued compliance with the UK GDPR and that additional safeguards can be considered and put in place.

10.3 Contractual and partnership arrangements

When Move More enters contractual or partnership arrangements which involve the processing of personal data, a written agreement will specify which party is data controller or whether there are joint data controller arrangements. Where a third party is processing personal data and information on behalf of the charity, a written contract will be put in place. Specific care will be taken in respect of services provided online and via 'the cloud'.

Where Move More remains as data controller, it will take steps to ensure that the processing by its contractors and sub-contractors will comply with UK GDPR. Contractors will not be able to sub-contract Data Processing without the explicit written permission of the charity. Staff will take reasonable steps to ensure that data processing by third parties is regularly monitored to ensure GDPR requirements are being met.

Where the parties are data controllers jointly or in common, the charity will liaise with the other party to ensure that all processing complies with UK GDPR. The responsibilities of each data controller should be expressly and clearly laid out.

All contractors who are users of personal information supplied by the charity will be required to confirm that they will abide by the requirements of the Regulation to the same standard as the charity with regard to information supplied by the charity. Staff should obtain advice from Legal Services as necessary.

All contractors, consultants, partners or agents of Move More must ensure that they and all of their staff who have access to personal data held or processed for or on behalf of the charity, are aware of this policy and are fully trained in and are aware of their duties and responsibilities under the Regulation. Any breach of any provision of the Regulation will be deemed as being a breach of the contract between Move More and that individual, company, partner or firm. Move More shall take reasonable steps to ensure regular monitoring of contracts and specifically the security of data being processed on its behalf.

Any observed or suspected security incidents or security concerns should be reported to Move More.

All contractors, consultants, partners or agents of the charity must allow data protection audits by the charity of data held on its behalf if requested in line with these contractual arrangements.

All contractors, consultants, partners or agents of the charity must indemnify the charity against any prosecutions, claims, proceedings, actions or payments of compensation or damages, without limitation.
